Wachiya:

Please find enclosed information about my Bill C-641: An Act to ensure that the laws of Canada are consistent with the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples.

I truly believe that this bill is important for future generations on this land, which is why I am asking for your support. Letters of endorsement are critical to demonstrate broad support during debates. I encourage you to call your Member of Parliament's office to ask him or her to support this bill. I also ask that you share the petition with members of your family and your community. You can send the signed petition and letters to our office in Ottawa; no stamp is necessary.

If you have any questions or comments, please do not hesitate to contact my team: Anna Collins, legislative assistant at 613-922-3030, romeo.saganash.a2@parl.gc.ca or Cam Holmstrom at 613-996-3076, romeo.saganash.a1@parl.gc.ca.

Yours sincerely,

Romeo Saganash

INTRODUCING

BILL C-641

Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples Act

Wachiya:

Thirty years ago, I was invited to go to the UN, by the Cree Ambassador, to begin negotiating for the Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples. Through my experience, many of the principles from Paix des Braves were brought into the UNDRIP process and were made part of the document.

It is with great pleasure that I am introducing my Bill C-641: An Act to ensure that the laws of Canada are consistent with the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples.

This is a unique opportunity for Canada to move towards a true nation-to-nation relationship with Indigenous peoples that reflects the letter, spirit and intent of our treaties. I hope that Indigenous people, organizations, governments and communities, and indeed all Canadians, will support this bill. It is time to send a clear message to the Government of Canada that all federal laws must respect the purposes and principles established in the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples.

I truly believe that this bill is important for future generations on this land, which is why I am asking for your support.

Inspiration

Cooperation

Implementation

UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon has hailed the Declaration as “a visionary step towards addressing the human rights of Indigenous peoples” and “a momentous opportunity for States and Indigenous peoples to strengthen their relationships, promote reconciliation and ensure that the past is not repeated.”

By ensuring that Canadian legislation respects the UNDRIP, the demands asserted by representatives of Indigenous peoples and their advocates for decades will begin to be respected within Canadian law. This means that all Canadian laws will be subject to review. Canada will be obligated to cooperate with Indigenous peoples.

Ratification will inform public opinion, influence public policy, and guide future jurisprudence. Indigenous peoples can use it in our pursuit for the full recognition, respect, and implementation of our rights. Human rights institutions and courts have used the Declaration as a standard to measure how Canada behaves toward our people, our communities, and our nations.

Many of the drafters of the UNDRIP believed that governments and international agencies would move quickly to implement the rights and strategies articulated in UNDRIP. That has not happened. Nor will it happen on its own.

UNDRIP is a powerful assertion by Indigenous peoples that we have survived, that we will survive, and that we insist on fair and just treatment by national governments and the international community at large. The implementation of the UNDRIP could prove to be a world-changing development.

The next step for Canada is Bill C-641. As this struggle for Indigenous Rights continues, empowered by the rights recognized in the UNDRIP, it is vital that the Canadian government fully protect and promote our rights within its own structure.

How can you help?

Send a letter from your organization to my office in favour of bill C-641.

Host an open house about the UNDRIP and discuss how ratification could benefit the community.

Collect signatures of support in a petition and send them to my office.

Fact Sheet on the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples

What is the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples?

1. The UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples is an international human rights instrument adopted by the UN General Assembly on 13 September 2007 after more than two decades of negotiations.

2. The Declaration affirms the inherent or pre-existing collective human rights of Indigenous peoples, as well as the individual human rights of Indigenous women, men and children. It provides a framework for justice and reconciliation, applying existing human rights standards to the specific historical, cultural and social circumstances of Indigenous peoples.

3. In its preamble, the UN Declaration is described as “a standard of achievement to be pursued in a spirit of partnership and respect.” Indeed, it reinforces the Treaty relationships that exist between Indigenous peoples and the Crown and which form “the basis for a strengthened partnership...”

4. The Declaration also states that the rights it contains “constitute the minimum standards for the survival, dignity and well-being of the indigenous peoples of the world.” (article 43)

5. In his role as UN Special Rapporteur on the rights of indigenous peoples, James Anaya states:

“The standards affirmed in the Declaration share an essentially remedial character, seeking to redress the systemic obstacles and discrimination that indigenous peoples have faced in their enjoyment of basic human rights.”

6. Like other international human rights declarations, the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples provides an authoritative source of guidance for all institutions of society, including legislators and government departments, courts, human rights bodies, and public institutions such as universities.

7. The Declaration is more than aspirational. Although declarations are not the same as treaties or conventions, they do have diverse legal effects. The Declaration reflects rights already found in human rights treaties. It also reflects what is known as customary international law – legal standards that have become obligatory on states through their widespread use.

8. Courts are free to rely on declarations in interpreting human rights – as are Indigenous and non-Indigenous governments and human rights bodies.

9. Unlike conventions, declarations do not need to be signed or ratified. Declarations adopted by the General Assembly are considered universally applicable from the time of their adoption.

10. International human rights standards are vital in promoting rights that states have failed to uphold. Domestic laws and policies should be reformed so as to uphold such global standards.

Is the Declaration consistent with the Canadian Constitution and Charter of Rights and Freedoms?

11. In a May 2008 open letter, over 100 Canadian legal scholars and other experts on matters of law and Indigenous rights, stated that not only is the UN Declaration “consistent with the Canadian Constitution and Charter,” it is also “profoundly important for fulfilling their promise.”

What is the Government of Canada’s position on the Declaration?

12. After opposing and campaigning against the Declaration for more than four years, the federal government issued an official statement of endorsement in November 2010. In its endorsement, and in other statements made since then, the federal government has not accepted that it is under any obligation to review and revise laws and policies to bring them into line with the standards set out in the Declaration.

This fact sheet was endorsed by Amnesty International Canada, Assembly of First Nations, Canadian Friends Service Committee (Quakers), Chiefs of Ontario, First Nations Summit, Grand Council of the Crees (Beyou Istchee), International Organization of Indigenous Resource Development, Innu Council of Nitassinan, Inuit Circumpolar Council, Inuit Tarpitit Kanatami, KAIROS: Canadian Ecumenical Justice Initiatives, Native Women's Association of Canada, Quebec Native Women / Femmes autochtones du Québec, Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs, Ermineskin Cree Nation, Louis Bull Cree Nation, Montana Cree Nation, Samson Cree Nation

13. There is an inherent contradiction in the notion of supporting an international human rights instrument only to the extent that it is consistent with a state's constitution and laws. Yet this is the position taken by the Canadian government on the UN Declaration. International bodies have indicated repeatedly to states that they should reform their laws and policies, so as to conform to international human rights standards.

14. Unilateral statements made by the Government of Canada, either in association with its endorsement or made elsewhere, do not affect the legal status of the Declaration in Canada.

15. Significantly, Canada's House of Commons endorsed the Declaration without condition or qualification in a resolution dated 8 April 2008.

How should the Declaration be implemented in Canada?

16. Governments, in conjunction with Indigenous peoples, are urged to use the Declaration as the basis for reviewing and reforming laws and policies to ensure that Indigenous peoples' rights are upheld without discrimination.

17. Courts and human rights tribunals can use the Declaration as a relevant and persuasive source in interpreting Indigenous human rights and related state obligations.

18. Indigenous peoples and their institutions are using the Declaration as a principled framework for advancing their rights, in their own policy- and decision-making and in their negotiations with governments and other third parties.

19. Civil society organizations are working cooperatively with Indigenous peoples, in promoting and implementing their human rights and maintaining the Declaration as a living instrument.

20. Educational institutions are encouraged to include the Declaration in their curriculum, including in teacher training.

21. Corporations and investors should ensure their human rights policies and business practices fully incorporate the standards in the Declaration.

What is happening internationally?

22. The global consensus that now exists in support of the Declaration reinforces its weight as a universal human rights instrument. The ongoing and widespread human rights violations against Indigenous peoples worldwide underline the urgency of realizing full and effective implementation of the Declaration.

23. The Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights emphasizes that the "Declaration is now among the most widely accepted UN human rights instruments. It is the most comprehensive statement addressing the human rights of indigenous peoples to date, establishing collective rights and minimum standards on survival, dignity, and wellbeing to a greater extent than any other international text."

24. The Declaration is being used by UN treaty bodies to interpret Indigenous peoples' rights and related State obligations under international treaties.

25. Similar use of the Declaration is being made by UN specialized agencies and the Human Rights Council's special procedures and mechanisms, which include special rapporteurs and independent experts. The Declaration is also being relied upon by domestic and regional courts, as well as other bodies within regional human rights systems in Africa and the Americas, including the Caribbean.

26. Greenland negotiated with Denmark significantly enhanced self-government, which its Premier describes "as a de facto implementation of the Declaration and... hopefully an inspiration to others".

27. The Supreme Court of Belize relied in part on the UN Declaration in an October 2007 case that affirmed the land and resource rights of the Maya people.

28. The Inter-American Court of Human Rights used the UN Declaration and other legal standards in its November 2007 ruling on the land rights of the Saramaka people in Suriname
